

CURRICULUM VITAE

Awi Mona

Current Position:

Associate Professor, Department of Educational Management- Master Program in Culture and Education Law, National Taipei University of Education.

Director of Industry Academic Collaboration and Incubation Center, National Taipei University of Education

Education:

Ph.D., University of Washington School of Law

Experiences:

Legal Aid Foundation	Director
Council of Indigenous Peoples	Member of Committee for Aboriginal Education
Ministry of Education	Member of Committee for Policies on Aboriginal Education
New Taipei City Government	Member of Committee for Aboriginal Education
National Taiwan University	Consulting Member of Center for Indigenous Studies
Taiwan Biobank	Member of Ethics and Governance Committee
Millet Foundation	Director
Chinese Association for Human Rights	Director

Specialties:

International law, human rights law, indigenous people law, cultural law

Biography:

Associate professor Awi Mona is himself an indigenous person from the Sediq People, as well as being the first person in our country with a professional doctorate degree in law dedicated to the research and development of the movements and legal systems of indigenous peoples. Being an indigenous scholar of law, he is devoted to the exploration and creation of indigenous law, and has made unique contributions to the professional legal field as a professional researcher of indigenous jurisprudence. All of this is evidence that he is one of the leading scholars of multicultural laws and peoples, and it also proves that the challenges of turning the laws and rights of Taiwanese indigenous peoples into national laws relies on the profound consideration and assistance of academic work.